“ I am Bernie's oldest child, and only daughter. He was a quiet, seemingly reserved man; and when my mother met him, she thought he was SHY, and that is how I got my name, Shyer. Although his career truly defined him and he was not home a lot. I have many vivid memories of him spending time with me. Letting my drive the car on his lap, dance with my feet on his shoes, drive the boat; even one occasion when I sat on his lap and held the wheel of the AA airliner taking us on vacation He was talented artistically, made little sketches all the time and painted fairy tale characters on my bedroom wall when I was a child. He traveled the world for work and pleasure, spoke fluent Spanish, and was always polite. He was an impeccable dresser. My mother told me you can judge the quality of a man by walking behind him; if the back of his neck is cleanly shaved and the heels of his shoes are not worn, then he's a keeper!
