

Richard "Rick" Lewis

October 29, 1933 - August 9, 2018

He will be remembered for his passion for creating fine art, the beauty and vibrant colors of Florida inspired him to paint. His family as well as his friends will miss him and a celebration in honor of his life will be planned at a later date.

Rick was grateful for the care he received from his doctors and nurses during his battle with Parkinson's

In lieu of flowers any donations you wish to make could be made to Parkinson Foundation at parkinson's.org or to Trustbridgefoundation.org.

He is heaven bound ...

“ He was my father. He was a terrible father but a very nice man. To know was him was to like him. He was an excellent artist and very intelligent. He just wasn't a particular loving parent. He loved you while you were with him but out of sight was out of mind.

He was not an abusive father, at least in the traditional way. More the "I promise 100% that I'll be there on your 10th birthday". Instead he wound up hooking up with the stewardess on the flight out to see you and never making it after all (PS: he wound up marrying her and she's a perfectly lovely person). That was sort of 50th in a long list of such broken promises.

He was estranged from his two eldest children Michael and Kelly, who found out he had passed purely by chance 50 days after he passed. While I am sorry he's dead for those still close to him, he left our lives many years ago.

With mixed emotions,

Michael Lewis

“ Rick was a gentle and generous man who loved his art. It was my privilege to share some time with him as one of his doctors. I will miss talking with him. My best wishes go to his family. Michael Borenstein, MD, PhD
